VITICULTURE

Lucido, also known as Catarratto Lucido, is a white grape variety integral to Sicilian viticulture, prized for its adaptability and historical significance in the region. Cultivated predominantly in the western parts of Sicily, particularly in the provinces of Trapani and Palermo, Lucido thrives in the island's sun-drenched, dry climate and diverse soils, ranging from clay-limestone to volcanic. This grape is a clone of the broader Catarratto family, distinguished by its glossy, waxy skin, which contributes to its resilience against drought and disease. Viticultural practices often emphasize canopy management to control vigour and enhance grape ripening, as Lucido can produce high yields if not carefully managed.

WINEMAKING

A soft pressing and fermentation maceration with selected yeasts at controlled temperature below 20°C in steel tanks. Cold stabilisation and bottling through isobaric filler.

TASTING NOTE

The model of a perfectly formed wine. Tropical and crisp citrus fruits, making this a refreshingly dry and zesty white wine.
